

Incarcerated Smiles

Do I really show my true smile, or do I hide the true smile. My real Smile. My smile says so many things and it's things that we really don't talk about when we smile.

I smile because of love, and the hope of love that there is in common people. Hoping that we share a common love for love itself.

If there is a love smile or a hopeful smile, can I show you how? At times I show my true smile and at times I may not because I choose to show you but you bring the best outta me.

If I showed my true smile, would you love me? Or would you hate me?

What if my smile represented love the true embodiment of that would you love me then or must I hide that smile at times.

It's a time to smile and a time not to smile. It's a season why we should smile and a reason why we hide our smiles from people, places, and things!
